From Office to Kitchen

Paula Ramos worked in a bank for twelve years. She had a good salary, a company car and a lot of stress. "I was always tired," she says. "I only relaxed on Saturdays, when I baked cakes for my family."

Two years ago, Paula made a big decision. She left her job and did a six-month training course at a cooking school. Her friends thought she was crazy. "You have a great career. Why throw it away?" her brother asked.

Today, Paula has her own small bakery in Lisbon. She gets up at four o'clock every morning, and she earns less money than before. But she has never felt happier. "At the bank, I sat in front of a computer all day. Now I use my hands and I talk to people," she says.

Her bakery has already won two local prizes, and she has just hired her first employee, a young man called Tiago. He has no qualifications yet, but Paula is teaching him everything she knows.

Paula's advice for people who are bored at work is simple: "Turn your hobby into your job — but make a plan first!"

 - a. for a hotel in Lisbon.
 - b. only on weekends.
 - c. every morning at four.
2. When Paula left the bank, her brother ...
 - a. thought it was a bad idea.
 - b. helped her open the bakery.
 - c. took her old job.
3. In paragraph 4, the word He refers to ...
 - a. Paula's brother.
 - b. a customer.
 - c. Tiago.
4. Now Paula ...
 - a. is happier than at the bank.
 - b. earns more money than before.
 - c. works fewer hours than before.
5. The text suggests that Paula ...
 - a. changed jobs without thinking.
 - b. believes planning is important.
 - c. wants to go back to the bank.
